

Having taken most of my flight training at Potomac Airfield, I feel very strongly that the so called "DC3" be reopened to all transient traffic. If the FAA feels that doing so would expose the public to any increased danger, they should provide any information supporting that position to the public. Surely, a light aircraft presents very little danger and I know of no situations where a small aircraft has been used for terrorist activities.